Summer Pleasures are on the Table in the May Issue of Flavors And More Magazine

At Flavors And More we're considering the pleasures of summer such as a burger on the grill enjoyed with a glass of Malbec wine. Our wine writer, Robert Paul, thinks Malbec is an underrated grape and tells you why. And he has specific budget bottles for you to try.

Chef Judi Gallagher judged a national pie contest recently and tells you all about it and supplies the winning recipe. She's also fallen in love with a new ice cream machine and is staying up nights making batches of Heath Bar Crunch ice Cream. She's got homemade ice cream recipes for you as well as her professional evaluation of the machine that is turning her into the Good Humor Man.

Meanwhile, our culinary travel writer Doc Lawrence is in Atlanta helping the city celebrate quite a few things with a Scarlett O'Hara cocktail. He includes the recipe for you and reveals a few secrets about the venerable and elegant Georgian Terrace Hotel which is 100 this year.

Our resident garden design writer Steven V. Philips is considering a modest koi pond as an addition to his yard. He visits an expert and helps you decide if you want a koi pond too.

Marsha Fottler is taken with tacos and explores books, statistics and the history of the taco and tortilla in the May issue of Flavors And More. Turns out the sale of tortillas is poised to surpass bread in America. But writer and cook Alex Harding says the taco is fine but for a meal it will never beat a great Mexican posole. He has a posole story and a recipe. But Herb Gardener wants to talk about sous vide and how chemistry lessons are perhaps becoming too involved with the preparation of food. Clearly, there's plenty to read about, think about, and talk about as well as great recipes you'll want to try in the May issue.
